Writing: Essential Question: We are learning to write opinion papers. What is an opinion?

Reading: We are finding the important events in stories, specifically The Snowy Day by Ezra Jack Keats. We've drawn the main character and began creating a scene from the book.

Math: We will continue to learn about money (featuring the quarter this week). We're going to revisit shapes (flat and solids) and their orientation to one another.

Social Studies: We are continuing to learn about Martin Luther King, Jr. and how we respect differences in others.

Things to do at home:
Sight words this week:
Ran, you, am

Writing Homework Folder: I waited until this next week to send homework folders for writing. I found a more useful source of information to put in the folders to help explain the writing.

Math: Focus on the differences between nickels and quarters. These two coins are easily confused at this age.

Valentine's Day

We'll be celebrating Valentine's Day with card exchanges. You may send a decorated box to school beginning on Monday, February 11th. I'm suggesting something as simple as a decorated cereal box since they work really well for the kids to deliver. You're also welcome to send a shoe box. Several people have asked if they could send in a snack for everyone and that is fine too. We have 21 students in our class. The names are listed on the next page.

Six Flags Read to Succeed

The reading logs are due no later than February 22nd in order to be able to earn a ticket to Six Flags. You must use and return the official reading log. If you miss the deadline or don't use the log then Six Flags will not give us a ticket. No late logs will be accepted by Six Flags. Please make sure you signed the form.

Thank you for the donations of items this past week. We now have enough supplies to make it for awhile.

Valentine's Class List

You may decide to leave the envelopes blank on the outside and have your child sign the inside. It would make it easy to just drop them in boxes instead of getting them mixed up.
